HE WHO ORDERS MUST PAY FOR THE DINNER.

New York Court Decides That a Man Is Not Responsible Because He Attends the Banquet.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, June 1.—Justice Stover, in the Supreme Court, has ruled that just because a man sits at the head of the table and makes all the speeches he does not have to pay for the dinner. Thus every one who can is affected, but in the case at issue the ruling was of particular interest to Louis Sherry, who filed suit against Doctor Joseph B. Bissell to collect the following bill:

pay the check."

The dinner guests at the Horace White cottage, at Elberon, N. J., in August, 1895, were the directors and stockholders of the New York and Westchester Water Company, of which Doctor Bissell was president. The doctor sat at the head of the table and was the guest of honor.

all the talking. People would be afraid to go to banquets. That would be an unjust rule to make. The case is dismissed."

"The effort to collect this bill has cost Mr. Sherry $1.50 already," said his lawyer ruefully, "and he doesn't seem to be any nearer to his money than he was on the alght of the affair."

Doctor Bissell's counsel said that he attended the banquet at the invitation of M. R. Crow. RENOVATING THE WHITE HOUSE.

Spring Cleaning Completed in Time for Mrs. McKinley's Return.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Washington, June 1.—When the President got back to the White House he found that all the spring cleaning had been done during his absence. Every carpet has been taken up and replaced with matting, window laces and draperies removed, and the upholstered furniture clothed with its summer linen.

Fresh coats of white paint have been applied to both the front and rear portiess, and the private corridor downstairs is also being retouched with the painter's brush. It is likely the entire building will be repainted outside, but as this work will be done from swinging scaffolds and no hammering will be necessary, it can be done at any time without annoyance to the occupants of the White House.

The only repairs now in progress that will not be completed within the next few days are about the conservatory. The work there is on rather an extensive scale, and has made necessary the removal of most of the potted plants. These have been arranged about the grounds in artistic groups, and form an attractive addition to the shrubbery. The constant use of water in the greenhouses quickly rots the woodwork, and much of this is now being replaced.

As a last resort he then sued Doctor Bissell.

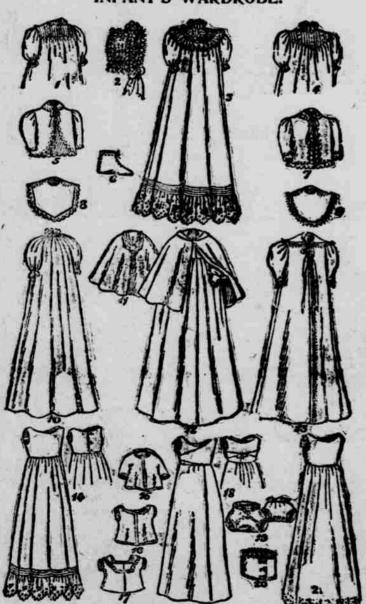

"What evidence is there that Doctor Bissell is responsible for this bill?" Justice Stover inquired.

"He sat at the head of the table," replied Mr. Sherry's counsel, "ate his share of the dinner and made most of the speeches."

"That isn't proof enoush," the Court answered. "It would be a dangerous precedent to make a man pay for a banquet simply because he sat at a particular seat and did

REPUBLIC SPECIAL,

Portland, Me., June 1.—Dame Ouillette defects the United States Internal Revenue officials and the State and county officials of Maine. What to do with her is a question that they have found difficult to answer. Under the hill in Portage Lake Plantation in Aroestock County she lives, selling day after day liquor for which she has paid no license.

Big mill wagons carrying down their loads to Ashland pass her door, and to many of the drivers she finds ready sale for her liquors, especially when the weather is cold. Travelers over the main turupike road between Ashland and Fort Kent must also pars her home.

All this traffic is good for the business of Dame Ouillette. Her cupboard is full or liquor. There is Geneva gin in the black, hump-shouldered bottles; there is amber "vatted" scotch whisky, there is cherry rum in jugs, bits of the huils and pulp of the black cherries flecking it, as its purple black jets come "honk-honk" from the jug's mouth; there is "morron," or the white rum of the section, the favorite leverage of the French Camadians. Dame Ouillette sells all these tipples to all comets.

There is nothing remarkable in the fact that the old French woman is in this bustness, for selling ilquor is a favorite employment of the dames of Northern Aroestock in certain sections. The safely as a favorite employment of the dames of Northern Aroestock in certain sections.

Doctor Everson and another physician, on the other hand, testified that in their opinion the baby could take the journey with perfect safety in the care of the father and Mrs. Armstrong.

Justice Maddox said that he was furprised that physicians should advise such a thing, and that he would give no weight to the testimony of the witness, Dector Everson, who had been called as an expert. Lawyer May, in pleading that the child be turned over to the possession of the father, spoke of the fact that Mrs. McKingley, wife of the President, although in very delicate health, had taken a much longer journey and making the trip on the advice of the child to remain where it was for the present. If the father returned when his daughter had become a year cider and renewed his application the court would consider it.

Meanwhile the mother, in 1847, had come to America. She married into a good family, becoming the wife of Henry Roberts. Her husband was subsequently killed in his father's mill. There were no children. Ten years later, in 1857, Mrs. Roberts married William J. Niles, in Rome, N. Y. The Nileres were well-to-do business people. The couple soon after their marriage moved to the little New York town of Angelica. Later, in Battle Creek, Mich., Mrs. Niles divorced her husband on the charge of non-support. He, however, died before the decree had been entered.

The agents of the administrator were told by surviving members of the Niles family that while Mr, and Mrs. Niles were living in Angelica a make child had been left on their deorstep. This child, they assert, was legally adopted under the name of Charles Perrere Irwin Niles. If he were living at the present time he would be about 35 years old.

met and married Van Nort. Later they came to New York. About this time Mrs. Van Nort sent to Ireland and found her daughter, who had married a farm laborer. Mrs. Van Nort purchased a country place for her daughter and her children. There were letters from mother to daughter, according to the daughter counsel, couched in the most affectionate language. In which the mother tells the story of her birth to the daughter and asks for her love.

When Mr. Van Nort died, his wife inherited some money, and it has been learned since her death that she was a heavy operator in Wall street. She was invariably successful. The administrator found the letters from the daughter, and this led to the finding of Mrs. Duffey. She has three children. Colonel Charles C. Suydam, her counsel, said:

"The case came to me in a very peculiar way. But the only thing in our way is the existence of this man Niles. If he turns up, and it be found that he was legally adopted, there will in that event be a contest, but if we establish either the fact of his death or his nonadoption we have a clear case. We have decided upon this measure of publicity that there may be no question as to our claim. We are unwilling to lend ourselves to the chains of any adventuress.
